VOLUME 25; NUMBER 12

RETURNS INDICATE DALY CITY FOURTH PLACE IN COUNTY

J. E. A. Miller, census enumerator, received a communication last Tuesday afternoon from Dr. W. C. Bailey, census supervisor of the Tenth district, San Jose, announcing the official returns from various towns in San Mateo county.

It is announced that Daly City now occupies fourth place in population among the cities of the county. San Mateo has the largest number of residents, Burlingame being in second place and Redwood City third.

The following are the official returns to date:

San Mateo	13,439
Burlingame	13,055
Redwood City	8,957
Daly City	7,833
South San Francisco	6,166
San Bruno	3,609
Belmont	989
Lawndale	369

On January 1, 1920, the population of Daly City was 3,799. On April 1, 1930, there were 7,833 people living in this city, showing a gain of 120 per cent during the past ten years.

The following are probably some of the reasons for this remarkable gain in population: Daly City enjoys good government, good schools, good water, good climatic conditions, excellent car service, and a splendid fire department and police department.

It is a known fact that during the past few years the home-seeker who comes to Daly City not only stays, but encourages his friends to buy a home here.

It is understood that Daly City's total will probably be increased over the above figures before the final count, as additional names are turned in by the checkers and enumerators.

In Dr. Bailey's letter, he asked Mr. Miller to convey his thanks to Mayor H. H. Smith, City Clerk B. C. Ross and the enumerators for their hearty co-operation and the complete results which they secured from Daly City.

Postoffice officials throughout the county also worked hand in hand with the enumerators, helping them in every possible way.

UNTIRING EFFORTS OF LOCAL POLICE FORCE REWARDED

Two Hoffman heaters were stolen from the M. & M. Builders in February, 1928, being taken from 266 and 267 Acton street. Upon the discovery of the theft of the heaters the local police department was notified and given the serial numbers by which to trace the missing heaters.

One heater was located, installed in a home at 1007 Bosworth street, it being located through the agency of a plumber who was called in to do repair work. After investigation it was found that this heater had been bought from Sam Ganic, of 679 Chenery street. Ganic said he had purchased the heater from two unknown Italians. He gave a description of both men, but when Chief of Police Doyle and a San Francisco police officer brought two men answering this description before Ganic, he seemed unable to recognize them as the ones who sold him the heater.

After much trouble and time spent by the Daly City police and San Francisco officers, Ganic decided to repay the M. & M. Builders for the heater. This proved a solution to the problem, and the McAvoy Brothers, better known as the M. & M. builders, decided to accept the money and drop the charges.

The regular meeting of the General Pershing P. T. A. was held Tuesday, May 6, in the P. T. A. room at the General Pershing school. The Vice-President, Mrs. Lyon, presided, as the president was attending the state convention at Riverside.

After finishing the regular business the members listened to a short talk by Mrs. Joseph Franzen. Mrs. Franzen and Mrs. Beulah Bacon were visitors from Visitation Valley P. T. A. The meeting then adjourned and refreshments were enjoyed by all.

MOTHER'S DAY PROGRAM AT GRACE PRESBYTERIAN

The Presbyterian church will observe Mother's Day on Sunday evening, at the 7:45 P. M. service. Going to church is after all the most fitting way to honor the memory of mother, and Grace church is planning on a suitable program in honor of her who is the cornerstone of the nation. Charles Dickens once said: "I think it must be somewhere written that the virtues of the mothers shall be visited on their children as well as the sins of the fathers." Special music will be a feature of the service.

MERCHANTS PLAN PICNIC ON MAY 25

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association held in the auditorium at the City Hall last Wednesday night.

Outside of the regular routine of business, the chief topic of interest was the forthcoming picnic to be held at Oak Cove Park, on May 25. Elaborate preparations are under way for the accommodation and entertainment of the largest crowd in the history of Daly City, for it is expected that almost the whole of Daly City's population will be there at least some time during the day.

The committee will spare neither expense nor labor to make the occasion a grand success.

All who intend to go with the crowd will assemble at the City Hall at 9:30 A. M., as that is the time set for the start. Don't forget the date is Sunday, May 25.

From there the parade will go to the county line and will then start south on Mission street, headed by the band and led by traffic officers who will escort the procession the whole way to the picnic grounds. All persons having room in their automobiles for others will be expected to take as many as possible, and there will be transportation furnished to all who have no machines.

At the picnic grounds, Oak Cove Park, which is just a few miles west of San Mateo on the Half Moon Bay road, there will be plenty of entertainment and plenty to eat and drink. While each family is expected to bring their own lunch, there will also be free ice cream, coffee, "hot dogs," sandwiches and other eatables supplied on the grounds.

There will be music and dancing, racing and ball games. There will be a ball game between the married men and the single men, races for the fat men and the thin men, and almost every other kind of sport and game known. There will be prizes offered for winners of these races and games.

The committee is indeed fortunate in being able to secure these beautiful grounds so easily accessible to the crowd that will be there. It takes only a little over a half hour to go from Daly City to Oak Cove Park, which fact is another inducement for a large attendance.

The committee, composed of Dr. F. P. Callen, Peter Pavlos, J. Plansky, William Haerdter, H. M. Cohn, and Andrew Vireno, the president of the Merchants' Association, is a sufficient warrant for the success of the occasion.

The Merchants' Association now has enrolled as members sixty-two merchants, business and professional men of Daly City, and it is predicted that there will be one hundred within a very short time, at the present rate of growth. This surpasses the expectations of its officers and members, and it is now the leading organization of Daly City, if not indeed of the county of San Mateo.

MEMBER OF DRUM CORPS IS PAINFULLY INJURED

Joseph Bolger, of Bellevue avenue, member of the Colma-Vista Grande drum corps, met with a very painful accident last Monday night in Eagles Hall. While getting drums down from the platform where they are kept while not in use, George Connolly, the drum major, was passing the drums one by one to Bolger. Mr. Bolger stepped to one side to lay one of the drums on the floor. Connolly did not notice this and dropped another drum down just as Bolger was arising, the drum striking his lip, cutting it badly.

Bill Ottoboni rushed Bolger to Dr. Cline's office, where it was found that five stitches would have to be taken to close the wound. The lower and upper teeth were driven into the gums and had to be brought back to their proper places. The inside of his mouth was also very badly lacerated. Mr. Bolger will have to remain at his home for some time until the injury heals. It was just one of those unfortunate accidents that occur in life.

SURPRISE PARTY GIVEN TO COLLEGE GRADUATE

College friends surprised Miss Grace Hauptli with a graduation party at her home, 87 San Pedro avenue, last Saturday evening. The evening was spent in playing bridge and dancing. Among the guests were Esther Aase, Margot Aase, Jerry Arsanian, Ramona Harner, Grace Hauptli, Lillian Hauptli, Clara Hoadley, Margaret Lemon, Alice Matthews, Leona Rose, Anna Sanbrailo, and Hermine Vujevich. Refreshments were served at 11:15 P. M. on a table prettily decorated in pink and white. Miss Hauptli is graduating from State Teachers' College at the Everett Junior high school on Church street, San Francisco, this (Friday) evening.

Mother's Day

MERCHANTS' TEAM SWAMPS VISITORS

Clicking on all eight behind Sam Hawley's smart pitching, the Daly City Merchants hung up a 13 to 1 victory over the Sixteenth Street Restaurant nine last Sunday on the Jefferson high school diamond.

Harry Maloney and Pat Sloan were the batting stars for the local clan, each collecting three hits. Maloney garnered three safeties in four official times at bat, while Sloan connected with a single, double and triple in five trips to the plate.

Hawley pitched a great game. He was nipped for six bingles and for six innings blanked the visitors, allowing but one hit. Sam struck out six batters and issued only one base on balls. More than half the putouts were fly balls, showing the brand of chucking he displayed.

The Merchants lost no time in going out in front. They scored one run in their half of the opening inning, and after that it was just a matter of how many more runners would cross the plate. In only one of the following frames, the fifth, the local boys failed to tally.

C. Aiello, the Merchants' speedy second baseman, displayed some more of his demoralizing base running in this game. He pilfered five sacks in the three times he was on base to bring his total of stolen bases up to nine.

The Epworth League will have the mothers of the church as their guests at their regular meeting at 7 in the evening. The pastor will speak on "Mother's Place in the World." Sunday school at 10 o'clock.

ANNUAL CONTEST RESULTS IN DRAW

After seven innings of fast and funny baseball, the game between the married and single men of Daly City, last Sunday, was called a draw. The score was 6 to 6.

The contest, although exceptionally close, was full of laughs and thrills. Neither team scored in the first two innings. The married men drew first blood, scoring one run in the third frame. The following stanza three more tallies were chalked up to give them a comfortable lead. But they did not hold it long.

The single men started hitting in their half of the fourth, to produce the necessary runs to tie the score. They put across two more in the sixth. The married men retaliated with two more runs, to knot the count again. T. Mellano started the rally with a single and Limas doubled to score Tony and Cavanaugh.

Bill Strand and Tony Mellano were the batting star of the day. Strand had a perfect day at the plate, collecting three in three times up, and Mellano garnered a brace of singles in four times at bat.

DALY CITY REPRESENTED AT RIVERSIDE CONVENTION

Monday, May 5, the long looked forward to and for which so much planning was done, at last arrived and the delegates chosen to represent the various P. T. A.'s started for the convention city, Riverside. These ladies left on the morning train from Third and Townsend, a P. T. A. special. Mrs. Ed. Boyle, the new president of General Pershing P. T. A., was there to see them off. Mrs. Ivy Alexander, representing Crocker P. T. A., also its president; Mrs. Lillian Fletcher, General Pershing's past president; Mrs. Charles McKee, president of Jefferson Union High P. T. A.

Each of these women have worked hard during the past year, and this honor conferred upon them is a befitting recognition of their labor. We hope they enjoy their trip and come home full of enthusiasm to carry on. Their advice and wise counsel will be of great help to those who have to assume the positions they are vacating.

HILLCREST CIRCLE, U. A. O. D.

Hillcrest Circle, U. A. O. D., held a very successful whist party at the Masonic Hall on Monday evening, March 28. A big crowd, a jolly crowd added a very pleasant evening to the new Circle. Mrs. Madeline Fellows was the chairman. Enough said.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR SCOUT CAMP

San Mateo County District, Boy Scouts of America, announces the fifth annual season of the San Mateo county Boy Scouts' training camp, at Pescadero, commencing on Saturday, June 14, to July 22. The first two week sessions ending July 12 are for the Boy Scouts, and the last ten days, from July 12 to July 22, are reserved exclusively for the Cubs (Junior Scouts, between the ages of 8 and 12 years.) The camp, as in past summers, will be under the personal direction of Edward A. Barrer, county field Scout executive, who has had 15 years experience as a boys' camp director. Assisting Mr. Barrer is an able staff of Scoutmasters and junior leaders, trained in the fundamentals of Scoutcraft through actual experience in former camps.

The enrollment is limited to 400 Scouts, or 200 in each of the two week periods. Applications for enrollment for either of the two periods or both will be accepted from Scouts in the order received on a "first come, first served" basis. Scouts are warned to file their applications as early as possible, as advance indications pre-empt a record enrollment for the 1930 season, with the possibility of late applicants having to be turned away for want of accommodations. However, every effort will be made to take care of all who wish to attend.

The plans have just been completed by the camp committee, under the chairmanship of George H. Arthur, of San Mateo, and call for the provision of every facility that the camp has afforded in years past, with substantial improvements along some lines. The charge per boy is $8 per week, and it is emphasized that this nominal amount barely covers actual costs of food and lodging, and is one of the lowest charges found in any camp.

Camp Pescadero has won recognition as one of the outstanding camps in the country for leadership, program and camp facilities. It enjoys a clean bill of health unmarred by a single case of serious illness or accident for its four consecutive years of existence. Every precaution is taken to insure the health and safety of the Scouts during their stay. That the camp is of direct benefit to health and general physical development is amply attested by actual individual card records of former seasons on file at the county headquarters, which show an average gain in weight per boy of from three to six pounds per period spent in camp.

Not only does the camp minister to physiques; a full program of activities makes an inactive moment impossible, and provides training in the Scout requirements and various lines of handicrafts adapted to the preferences of the individual Scouts. Contact with older Scouts and men, and the responsibility of "being on his own," develops the lad's sense of self-reliance; association with boys of his own age and gives him training in discipline and group co-operation and an opportunity to develop budding leadership ability. But the best testimony of the success of the camp is that of a boy who has been there and enjoyed those never-to-be-forgotten weeks of pure fun, adventure and action; or of fathers and mothers who have actually seen the camp in action and observed its salutary effects on the character of their own sons.

FIELD MUSIC MEET

The California Field Music of F. O. E. held a meeting at Crockett last Sunday in preparation for the Grand Aerie convention and state convention to be held in San Francisco, August 11 to 16. Thirty-four delegates were present, representing Sacramento, Stockton, Roseville, Oakland, Daly City, Alameda, South San Francisco, Crockett and as far south as Bakersfield. Mr. Clark, of Sacramento, was the presiding officer. Upon the conclusion of the business meeting those assembled adjourned to partake of a splendid spread, fried rabbit and spaghetti and all the trimmings that go to make such an affair a success. Crockett surely does know how to entertain her guests. Daly City was represented by Councilman Arthur J. Bodien, William Bolger, George Connolly, "Spotts" Nessler, Fred Collins and Joseph Bolger.

Death Trap is Doomed

On the recommendation of City Engineer M. M. O'Shaughnessy of San Francisco, the board of public works decided on Wednesday of last week to advertise for bids for the construction of a concrete safety zone at the death trap intersection at Mission and Acton streets. Within a short period of time, according to records, several people have been killed while standing within the present safety zone, which is marked only by buttons. This is the first set of safety buttons one encounters after passing over the San Mateo county line.

TRAGEDY FOLLOWS END OF ROMANCE

Broken in health and jobless, Arthur Brown, brother of Mrs. Nora Barasota, of Peoria street, formerly superintendent of a large cement concern of Calaveras county, committed suicide after shooting his wife to death with a rifle, last Friday.

The shooting occurred on the steps of Mrs. Brown's home in San Andreas, Calaveras county, as John Dalton, superintendent of the Calaveras county hospital, waited to escort Mrs. Brown to the hospital, where she was employed as a nurse.

Brown, who divorced his wife, Mrs. Grace Menster Brown, last January on charges of cruelty, came to her home on Friday, May 2, according to neighbors. He told friends he had come to get some fishing tackle he had left there when he moved to Daly City. He waited at the home of R. J. Casey until Mrs. Brown returned, and then accompanied her to her house.

It was an hour later that Dalton drove up to the Brown home. As he stepped from his machine Mrs. Brown appeared on the threshold. As she walked out she turned and remarked: "Don't do that, Art."

Then Brown appeared suddenly behind her, a small rifle leveled at her back. He pulled the trigger twice, both shots taking effect. Before Dalton could interfere, Brown shot himself through the heart.

Officers offered the theory that Brown, having failed to effect a reconciliation with his wife, decided that life wasn't worth the struggle, and decided to end it as the only solution of his troubles.

Mrs. Barasota said her brother quit his job as superintendent at the cement plant in Calaveras county when his wife left him, and had worried himself into poor health.

The news of the tragedy was not told Brown's aged mother, who lives with Mrs. Barasota. Mrs. Barasota and her mother have the sympathy of the entire community as a result of this terrible tragedy which has overtaken them.

P. T. A. MEMBERS HONOR WORKERS

On Thursday evening, May 1, the members of the Jefferson High P. T. A. gave a surprise handkerchief shower and bon voyage party at the home of Mrs. Charles McKee, 279 Irvington street, to Mrs. M. Wegner, who left yesterday for a visit to Germany, expecting to be gone until Christmas.

Dutch whist was enjoyed and after the game all adjourned to the dining room for the main event of the evening. The table was beautifully decorated in pink and green and a large four-mast sailing vessel adorned the center of the table, the sails being made entirely of handkerchiefs, white ones, colored ones, plain and fancy ones. Mrs. Wegner expressed her appreciation and said she would certainly be reminded of Jefferson High P. T. A. every day.

The big surprise of the evening came when Mrs. T. Bentley in a few well chosen words presented Mrs. McKee with a beautiful corsage of artificial flowers, saying it was just to show the appreciation of the association for the wonderful year just closing, and looking forward to a banner year for 1930-1931. Mrs. McKee responded by thanking them all for their wonderful co-operation, and said nothing could have been accomplished without their hearty support. A small active membership is more to be desired than a large inactive membership.

Those enjoying the evening were: Mrs. and Mrs. George E. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. T. Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. A. Gehring, Mr. and Mrs. Hackley, Mr. and Mrs. McIsaacs, Mr. F. W. Schmidt, Mrs. Kinsman, Mrs. Lorenz, Mrs. Brauns, Mrs. Wegner, Mrs. H. H. Smith, Mrs. L. Landini, Mrs. H. Cohn, Mrs. Pescaro, Mrs. Grantham, Mrs. Charles D. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. McKee, Miss Evelyn McKee, Mr. Bill Ramey and Mrs. Robert Baker, of Reno, Nevada.

ENJOYABLE BIRTHDAY PARTY

A birthday party was given last Wednesday in honor of Mrs. G. W. Crossland, of 63 San Diego avenue. A pleasant time was spent in meeting old friends, after which refreshments were served. Mrs. Crossland received many beautiful gifts. Those present were Mrs. John Blair, Mrs. G. W. Crossland, Sr., Mrs. Charles Village, Mrs. Hodack, Mrs. Roy Glending and daughter Audrey, Mrs. Mata Wohler, Mrs. Edward Edmond and son Robert, Mrs. Edith Breslin and daughter Catherine, Mrs. John Pesce and baby Claude, Miss Margaret Saame, Mrs. Betty Saame, Mrs. John Saame, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Crossland and daughters Anna May and Alice Beth.

NEW LINE COMPLETED BY WESTERN PACIFIC

Through freight service between territory in Solano county served by the Vaca Valley branch of the Sacramento Northern Railway and points reached by the Sacramento Northern and its connections was opened yesterday.

This is the result of the completion of 7½ miles of railroad between Creed, a station 32 miles west of Sacramento on the Sacramento Northern's main line between Sacramento and Oakland and San Francisco, and Vacaville Junction, a station on the Vaca Valley branch.

The Vaca Valley branch, 15 miles in length, operates between Vacaville and Suisun-Fairfield, and also to Willotta. This branch was originally constructed as part of the projected Vallejo Northern, planned to operate between Vallejo and Sacramento. By the connecting up of the Vaca Valley branch with the main line of the Sacramento Northern, which was accomplished yesterday, the Vaca Valley branch is no longer isolated from the other lines of the Sacramento Northern.

To effect this transportation improvement approximately $400,000 has been expended on the construction of the connecting line. Work has been rushed during the last few months in order that through service might be inaugurated in time to handle this year's fruit crop.

Shippers located on the Vaca Valley branch, which serves an important fruit and agricultural section of Central California, will now be able to load their cars at a later hour in the day and in ample time to enable the Sacramento Northern to transport them to Sacramento and connect with the fast fruit blocks of the Western Pacific, thereby making the same arrival time at eastern markets as heretofore. Through the construction of the new connecting line, the territory served by the Vaca Valley branch also gains a new outlet to the San Francisco Bay region as well as to Sacramento and other points served by the Sacramento Northern and its connections.

For the year 1929, the distribution of the trans-Atlantic calls by countries at the European end was about as follows: England, 52 per cent; France, 32 per cent; Germany 8 per cent; and other countries, 8 per cent.

About one firm in 100 fails every year, whether times are good or bad.

FEDERATION HAS FIRST BIRTHDAY

Last Sunday afternoon, May 4, in Corinthian Hall, corner of Mission street and Russian avenue, there was a most enjoyable first anniversary celebration and dinner of Section No. 20 of the Italian Catholic Federation, given in honor of Fire Commissioner Cesare Restani of the City of San Francisco.

The purpose of this organization is to promote Christian welfare amongst its members, as well as being beneficiary. The Federation is composed of thirty sections throughout the state, and Section 20, which is just one year old, has a total membership of 175. Every second Monday of the month a social dance is given by the members in Corinthian Hall.

Commissioner Restani was the first president of this unit; and upon the expiration of his term he was made Honorary President for life. Mr. Restani is also grand treasurer of the Central Council.

The organization feels proud and fortunate to have such a man as Cesare Restani as one of its leaders. He is a faithful worker in the Fire Prevention League of San Francisco, and is always in for any kind of civic betterment and advancement, whatever it may be.

For this year Mr. Raucci is acting as president of Section 20, and Lully Ghio as vice-president.

Mayor James Rolph, Jr., was represented by Fire Commissioner P. Meherin.

Chief Brennan of the San Francisco Fire Department, Lieutenant Jack Coyne, Ed Ford, division engineer of the P. G. & E., and Harold Jones of the Corporation Yard, made speeches to fit the occasion.

Visitation Valley district was represented by William (Beef Steak Bill) Markt; the 347th Artillery by Tim Haggerty and Harold Caldwell; Daly City by City Councilman A. J. Dalton and a delegation of twenty-five friends; Colma by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Garibaldi and friends, and Lawndale by Judge Knutte.

Dinner music for the occasion was furnished by Prof. Claudio, and the dance music by Frank Cozzo and his band.

Vocal solos were offered by Mrs. Joe Garibaldi, of Colma, who is a pupil of the talented Miss Fischen. Mrs. Garibaldi's numbers met with a tremendous applause and most favorable comment.

Detective Sergeant Lippi of the San Francisco Police Department, and Andrew Marcelli sang a number of songs in a most acceptable manner.

The balance of the evening was taken up with dancing.

DRAMATIC RESCUE MADE BY TELEPHONE EMPLOYEE

Racing against time and tide, two telephone company linemen rescued a youth who had fallen from a fifty foot precipice to the Pacific Ocean tide line, according to word received by Manager Lyle M. Brown, of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. The accident took place near Little Sur, 18 miles south of Carmel.

The dramatic rescue was effected by L. W. Kehoe and C. A. Dorn, who were spending a holiday taking pictures along the coast. Frank Urquidez, Jr., 25, of Salinas, the victim of the accident is in a serious condition in a Monterey hospital.

Urquidez and a young companion, Mervin Silva, were on an abalone expedition.

Clambering over the rocks at the top of a cliff, Urquidez lost his footing and hurtled into a 50 foot abyss. Virtually paralyzed from his injuries, he was unable to crawl from the rocky basin, lapped by the sea.

Silva's efforts to reach Urquidez were futile. He made his way to the highway and hailed Kehoe and Dorn. The three returned to the scene of the accident. With the aid of ropes, the injured man was hoisted up the face of the cliff.

Before Urquidez could be removed from the rocks, the tide had risen to his chest, hampering the rescuers. Kehoe and Dorn declared that their first aid training, required of all telephone employees, facilitated the rescue.

It is proposed to permit American women who marry foreigners to retain their citizenship. But it is doubtful if any law will enable them to retain their money.

BILLION AND A HALF FOR ROADS PLANNED

During 1930, the states and their counties will spend over $1,601,000,000 for highway improvements, $250,000,000 more than in 1929.

According to the Department of Agriculture, $663,667,000 of this will be spent on local roads and bridges and the balance on state highways. Officials of 45 states estimate the total length of roads to receive attention as 32,532 miles.

At present our greatest need is the construction of feeder or farm-to-market highways. The American Farm Bureau Federation has been a leader in an aggressive campaign to obtain for the farmer the year-round, hard-surfaced roads that, as one of our foremost producers and taxpayers, he deserves. So long as a great majority of farmers are cut off from their markets during many months of the year because of impassable roads, agricultural progress must be retarded.

If our vast road building appropriations are fairly and efficiently used, with the aim of obtaining the best possible results, adequate feeder roads can be built without burdening the taxpayer. Every state should adopt a program for constructing five, ten or fifteen miles of farm-to-market roads for every mile of main highway.

The United States has four times the number of automobiles of all the rest of the world combined and less than half of the world's road mileage. Our good roads movement is just getting well started.

According to the Literary Digest, the United States, like ancient Gaul, is divided into three parts—dry, moist and wet.

ESTABLISHING NEW RECORD FOR FIRES

Recently the National Board of Fire Underwriters issued a summary giving the causes for the greatest fire losses in each state in 1928. In nineteen states cigarettes, cigars and matches were responsible for the waste; in eleven states, defective chimneys and flues; in five states, boilers, furnaces, and the like; in two states, sparks on roofs, and in three states, misuse of electricity, oil products and spontaneous combustion.

A little care in disposing of matches and cigarettes; frequent inspections of chimneys, flues and electric wiring, and careful storing and handling of gasoline on the part of American citizens, would greatly reduce our fire loss almost overnight.

During March, the total estimated loss was $42,964,392, representing an increase of $1,686,578 over the same month last year. And the loss during both January and February was appreciably in excess of the loss in 1929. If the present trend continues, 1930 will probably see the establishment of a new high record for fire waste.

Must we admit that we, alone among the world's great nations, are so careless or incompetent that fire is beyond our control?

MOTORISTS PAY MILLIONS FOR GAS

Gasoline taxes for expenditure on California highways amounted to $8,775,199.42 during the first three months of 1930. This was revealed at Sacramento by John C. Corbett of San Francisco, member of the State Board of Equalization, who administers the law imposing a three cent tax on each gallon of motor vehicle fuel sold.

California motorists have almost doubled their use of gasoline since 1924, which was the first complete year of the tax. Comparisons made by Corbett, who has been a member of the Equalization Board since 1914, show that assessments for the first quarter have increased from 157,128,655.5 gallons six years ago to 295,461,257.1 gallons this year.

In addition to administration of the gasoline tax, the State Board of Equalization directs the major part of the balance of California's revenue system, including taxes on railroad companies, power companies, telephone companies, highway transportation companies and other public utilities, as well as insurance companies. These taxes now aggregate more than $40,000,000 annually, having increased from $7,200,000 in 1911, when the equalization board was first placed in charge of them.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

The Inland Empire Gas Company, operating a gas plant in El Centro, and serving other cities in the valley by means of gas containers, has been sold to the Pacific Public Service Company of San Francisco. H. W. Burkhardt, organizer and president of the Inland Company, announced.

With 164 applications for old age pensions already passed on by the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors and awaiting action by the State Social Welfare Commission, more are being received daily by Miss Paulene Olsen, county social service secretary. By the time of the next meeting of the county board more than twenty additional affidavits will be awaiting action, it is said.

A replica of the original stockade about the Russian fort and church at Fort Ross in Sonoma county, has been built by the State of California, which for many years has owned the historic landmark. It is built of hewn timber, just as it was constructed by the Russians in 1811. Two sides of the stockade just built will probably be added to later on, if another appropriation can be supplied to complete the work.

Following a report of the Stanislaus County 1929 grand jury that a new court house is needed, members of the Board of Supervisors are wrestling with the problem of financing it. Several years ago a proposition to issue bonds for $800,000 to construct the court house at Modesto was overwhelmingly voted down.

The engineering phases of the contract for the leasing of the Folsom dam site to the American River Hydroelectric Company of San Francisco was the subject of a conference between State Engineer Edward Hyatt and State Finance Director Lyman M. King. A tentative draft of the lease has been submitted to officers of the company. Eleven such drafts have been made, but none has proven acceptable to the state department of finance.

Officially, California has gone on record as perhaps the most "air-minded" of the United States. It has approved, according to announcement, a transcontinental flight, at State expense, for Attorney-General U. S. Webb. No other State, Webb's office declared, has sanctioned such a flight for an official. Webb, forced to appear before the House-Senate Immigration committee to argue for Filipino exclusion, must also be in San Diego to attend a meeting of the State water commission three days later. Hence the long air journey at State expense.

San Joaquin County is spending large sums for the benefit of crippled children, according to the report filed by the San Joaquin County welfare department. Expenditures shown include: San Joaquin County welfare department, $1620.24; San Joaquin County crippled children's fund, $5058.50; service clubs, $6976.72; Crippled Children's Society, $2599.31, making a grand total of $16,260.77. Dr. Howard H. Markel, San Francisco, conducts the monthly clinics.

Manuscript writing is giving way to garden culture at Carmel these days. At the bidding of the Carmel Woman's Club, amateur gardeners are hoeing weeds and watering shrubs and flowers in preparation for the garden contest. Competition is planned for the best small garden, hillside garden, rock garden, woodland garden and conventional garden. The whole town's at it. Poets, actors, novelists, painters and the village grocer are spending their spare time digging.

Preliminary engineering work on the reduction of the San Juan grade on the Coast Highway will start immediately. The plans call for a reduction in the summit from 1015 feet to 550 feet and the reduction of the number of curves from 113 to 38. The minimum sight distance on the present road is 75 feet. This will be increased to 600 feet.

Two Northern California highway units contracts have been awarded at Sacramento by the State Department of Public Works. Award for construction of a concrete, 105-foot bridge across the Feather River, Plumas County, went to A. T. Howe, Santa Rosa, at $10,990. C. W. Wood, Stockton, received contracts for paving a mile of highway through Wheatland, Yuba, at a cost of $31,296. Surfacing of 20 miles of road in Lassen County has been completed and accepted by the State. It was also announced.

Because the Santa Fe Railway waited for more than a year to demand of Contra Costa County that it pay $108.27 toward cost of painting an overhead highway crossing near Pittsburg, the railroad will have to foot the entire bill. When demand was made for payment at Martinez, the Board of Supervisors rejected the claim on account of its being more than one year old.

Sacramento was chosen as the 1931 convention city of the city planning conference of the California Real Estate Association.

With the passage of two resolutions by the board of supervisors Fresno County expressed a willingness to enter into a joint highway district with other counties of the San Joaquin Valley to bring about the consummation of a highway from Morro Bay to Yosemite Valley.

Plans for an entirely new hospital for the Veterans Home at Yountville are under consideration, according to advices received from Sacramento. There are now 1550 veterans at the Yountville institution, according to John R. Quinn, in charge of veterans' affairs.

Eureka's new National Guard unit, Company I of the One Hundred and Eighty-fourth Infantry, was recently mustered into the United States service. Major C. E. McCarthy, regular army instructor, administered the oath.

The War Department has approved plans for a bridge across the westerly arm of Alamitos Bay, at Long Beach, Cal., and for one across Snodgrass Slough, a tributary of the north fork of the Mokelumne River.

H. C. Ross, division manager of the Pacific Gas & Electric Company, at Fresno, has announced approval of plans for the extension of the company's natural gas transmission line from Fresno to Fowler and Sanger. The extension will involve an expenditure of $113,983. More than 63,000 feet of six and one-half-inch pipe will be laid.

The Forest Service is entirely agreeable to the proposal of the Oakdale Chamber of Commerce that sufficient timber be withdrawn to furnish a screen along the new Big Oak Flat road, according to a letter sent to Congressman H. E. Barbour by R. Y. Stuart, chief forester at Washington. According to Forester Stuart, lumber companies will co-operate in preserving the beauties of the mountains and the indications now are that the Chamber of Commerce has finally won the fight it has been waging for years on the Big Oak Flat road.

Bones of a man dead for more than a century were examined recently by Frank M. Lipp, Yuba County coroner, who estimated their age. The bones were found by miners at Parks Bar, seventeen miles east of Marysville on the Yuba River. Lipp believes that the bones were those of an Indian.

The Senate passed the House bill authorizing the secretary of interior to survey conditions in the Palo Verde and Cibola Valleys in the vicinity of the Colorado River in California with a view to flood protection.

State traffic officers of Springville and rangers of the Sequoia National Forest, on a recent Sunday afternoon stopped 251 automobiles at the Springville Ranger Station between 2 p. m. and 5 p. m. coming out of the hills. Of these machines, sixteen were found to be carrying red bud or white stencils, both of which are protected by law. The drivers were cited to appear before Judge Cross of Springville for a hearing. Yucca plant and slippery elm are also protected by a Tulare county ordinance which has been in effect since 1932. Complaints have been received from various parts of the foothill sections this spring regarding motorists gathering these native shrubs and flowers. Signs have been posted in a number of places calling attention of motorists to the law.

California Inc. broadcast a call in the April issue of its bulletin for 1000 volunteer salesmen. It is addressed to men whose own business takes them to Eastern cities. The state publicity organization will have prepared for each volunteer a sales kit filled with California statistics and information which they may present to their contacts. Plans are also being made by the organization to take a census of all tourists visiting California this season. Some facts which this pool may reveal are: That Muir Woods is the most visited national monument in the United States. That Yosemite National Park is visited each year by more persons than any other national park. That students at Stanford University will give the directions to President Hoover's home before a stranger has completed his question. That as individuals Californians do not talk enough about the state's beauty points for fear of "boasting."

Local property taxation provides 86 per cent of all funds spent on public schools in California. This was disclosed in a statistical study of educational revenues made public by Vierling Kersey, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Kersey also filed a report with Governor Young showing the various sources of the "school dollar" as follows: Every cent spent on kindergartens is provided by the school districts. Of the elementary school dollar, 55.6 cents come from the district, 24.3 cents from the county, 19.9 cents from the State and 2 of a cent from the Federal government. The Federal government furnishes the same amount for high schools. The State provides 7.2 cents of every dollar expended on high schools; the county, 15.6 cents; the district, 77 cents.

California's municipal, county and state governments made expenditures totaling $725,250,201 during the last year, an increase of $33,982,101 over disbursements of the previous year. It was announced by State Controller Ray L. Riley. Municipal payments aggregated $236,968,671; county, $343,292,761, and state, $144,988,768. Highways constituted the largest single item of municipal expenditures, being 17 per cent of the total. Schools, the largest item of county payments, were 37 per cent of the total. Controller Riley also reported that the 1929 bonded debt of municipalities, counties and state totaled $781,407,305, an increase of $25,088,709 over the previous year. Bonded debts of California municipalities were $360,252,849, counties, $299,977,956; state, $121,176,500.

The Standard Oil Company of California is the first firm to reserve and pay for display space at the 1930 Tulare County Fair to be held at the local fair grounds.

Geological survey of California in the interests of the mining industries is now going forward under the State Division of Mines with sanction of the newly appointed State Mining Board. Statistics in various districts are being compiled and checked by field engineers as the basis for proposed area maps, to be followed eventually by publication of a complete geological map of the State.

As if she had been a partner in the few seconds of his thoughts, Carla spoke softly, giving him her hand again in the night which shut them in.

"I want to hear you say it, Paul! I have dreamed, and even prayed in my wickedness, and have fancied your voice telling me the story. For that I have many times asked God to forgive me. But now it is right and just. I want to hear you say—you love me."

"I do," said Paul. "I know—now—that I have loved you from the beginning of time, before I came to the Mistassini, before I was born in this life—a thousand or a million years I have worshiped the soul that is you. Sometime, it may have been ages ago. I know that you belonged to me."

"I have always belonged to you," said Carla. "Yours is the love I thought was hopelessly gone from me—up there. But to die with you is my right. Can there be such a thing as doubt for us now?"

"I am sure there cannot," he said. "You would like to live?"

"Without you, no."

"And there is no chance—no hope of saving ourselves?"

"I can conceive of none. No force could contend with the maelstroms in the throat of the chasm. At the other end all physical matter is ground to pulp as the water comes out through the gorge. We are caught between the two."

He calmly and frankly spoke the truth to her. She made no reply in words, but he could feel her response creeping through her finger tips to him, could feel the tremble and thrill of it in her body. He had not frightened her, but had dispelled from her the beginning of a fear. She did not want to live. The truth seized upon and helped him with a kind of shock. Yet it was a simple thing, one he should have known without intuition or discovery. For Carla was not only a woman, but a soul. Back there, in Claire's world, she would be lost to him—no matter what he might do in the way other men had solved such problems. Only here, in a beginning and an end all their own, could she belong to him.

Again she was in his heart, listening to his thoughts.

"It is strange, but I want to sing in this darkness," she said. "I did not know that blindness could be so beautiful!"

"Nor I!" he answered.

CHAPTER X

During the night following Paul's accident and Carla's leap, men were active below the gorge. Derwent lost no time in racing back to the Mistassini, and the presence of a hundred men below the chasm before midnight was the result. Every device of engineering science and unlimited resource which might be employed came with them. The big pool at the foot of the gorge was a glare of illumination, and men went down the river with their flaming torches, afoot along its banks and in canoes between them, questing for a shred of something which a few hours before might have been a part of Paul or Carla.

Lucy-Belle, shocked into sickness, was taken to her home. But Claire remained. Men who saw her in the weird glow of the lights will never be able to forget the image of her face as it was photographed upon their memories. Her blue eyes were so wide open and staring, so filled with an unwavering sapphire flame that at times Derwent thought of her as a spirit-goddess instead of a woman. Could Paul have seen her he would have known that at last she had conquered her fear and repugnance of the wilderness. She had come with the first men before a trail was cut. Her dress and shoes were torn, her soft skin bruised and bleeding. Where the water crashed and thundered loudest out from between the chasm walls she stood unafraid, until Derwent twice drew her back from the nearness and danger of it. She resented his appeal to leave the search to others, and Derwent made it only once. A white face, watching for its death—that was what men would remember. Eyes flamingly blue, hungrily searching the black stream as it came from the mountain. A fragile form that seemed tireless, as steel. A woman, and yet more than woman—an unforgettable spirit, a vision that was like tragic music, always to be remembered.

She did not give up with the first hours of evening, but continued to watch through the night. She did not move from the foot of the gorge and her pool, as if she were sure that whatever came to her would be found there. Derwent was frequently with her, and tried to talk, but her lips framed few words. Not until day came again did something give way at her, and hopelessness take its place. Then he took her home to Lucy-Belle. "I waited too long," she said to him, and afterward, back with the searching men, he wondered what she had meant.

These searchers, could they have looked through the rock, would have seen a fire. It was the second night for Paul and Carla in a place where night and day were the same. Paul had found drifts of wood along the edge of the sand, mixed with pitchy pine, and a little spot in their world was illumined by light.

In the fire glow sat Carla, combing her long, silky hair with her fingers. Paul watched her as she smoothed and braided the tresses, employing as great care as though she were in her bedroom at home. This was the third time she had given it such attention in their thirty-six hours of entombment. At other times he had held a light for her at the edge of the water while she bathed her face and hands, and once she had said to him: "It is wonderful water, almost as soft as that which comes with rain." She spoke as if they might have been camping on one of the streams they loved, with the sky above and flowers about them. It was her utter acceptance of their fate as a thing of happiness which transformed what would have been a hell for him into a heaven.

In the Fire Glow Sat Carla, Combing Her Long, Silky Hair With Her Fingers.

She had sat in the soft sand at his feet, a few moments before, with her head pillowed against his knees, and there she had unbraided her hair for him to caress, as she watched and pointed out for him the unusual and beautiful pictures that built themselves in the changing coals and crumbling embers of the fire.

Now she was a little distance from him, and no sense of dread or fear oppressed him as he followed the rhythmic movements of her slim white fingers braiding her hair again.

If it were madness which possessed him it was a beautiful madness, a sense of joyous living where there should have been despair. At first the fighting part of him had instinctively struggled against it, but now he accepted it fully, until, seeing Carla as she was, death seemed vague and far away and the glory of life very near. They had made no effort to hide from themselves the coming of the end, and Carla thought of it as a beautiful thing, a little journey, which they were making gladly together. Never had Paul believed so surely in a God. He had found himself fond of telling her how he loved her hair more than any other physical thing about her, and she had said: "I am going to spread it out so you may put your face in it when we lie down to sleep." This was the way she spoke of what was to come—as sleep. To drift off like this, his arms about her, seemed to Paul the fruition of a great privilege and joy, and not a triumph of fleshly dissolution. He had told her little stories about his mother and of the time they had spent sun-filled hours in the Indian burial place at Brantford, where the proud est of her forest ancestors were buried.

Unnumbered Victims of

Dream of Easy Wealth

Sudden wealth, acquired without labor, assuring ease and luxury and power, appeals to the avaricious instinct of many otherwise sound and intelligent people. The thrill of expectation, of suspense, the possibility of success with the next spin of the wheel, the next turn of the card, the next shovel of earth has kept men fighting odds since history began, says the St. Paul Dispatch.

There is a romance to search for buried treasure, to stories of unearned wealth won in the gold fields, the roulette wheel, the gaming table and the stock market that is fascinating. It blinds its victims to risk and danger. They give no thought to how many are beaten.

Men seldom boast of their losses, so failures in the gamble for easy wealth rarely win the spotlight. Now and then a paragraph tells of a broken spirit ending his life. Young men who gamble with their company's money are frequently imprisoned as embezzlers. But these are the dramatic incidents that get into print. The thousands who risk and lose their life's savings sink out of sight without leaving a ripple on the surface.

It is sometimes worth remembering that all who play do not win.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

YANGTZE

It was along the eastern coast of China that David first saw the Yangtze river. Yangtze spoke to him at once and said:

"I've heard from Geo, David, that you've talked to other rivers, and I hope you're not so weary of river ramblings and talk but what I can tell you my story too."

"Yes," said David, with a certain amount of pride, "I've become quite well acquainted with rivers, but I should love to hear your story, Yangtze. It will be wonderful when I get back home to say I've talked to the Yangtze river way over in China."

Yangtze smiled a jolly, happy smile. "If I talk too much," he said, "you may stop me, but you can't stop me from flowing in a river way. I've a river brother who is important around here too, named the Yellow river or Hwang Ho. Between us we've built up a great plain and they've helped us with canals so as to enable people to get from one rice field to another. We're all mighty fond of rice. Most of the big ports such as Canton and Shanghai and Tientsin are near our mouths."

David really didn't mind how much Yangtze talked. He loved hearing the Chinese names. To him they had always been names he had never expected to know familiarly.

"To be sure," Yangtze was continuing, "we care about corn, too, and grain and silk."

"But what a good time I have! Great ships from the sea come sailing up along my river. I let them go as much as a thousand miles and how I do enjoy them. Beyond that distance there are rocky gorges and rapids. Only smaller boats can go further. Come along and wander with me."

So David went wandering along the Yangtze river. He saw pagodas and slender bamboo trees. Yangtze told him that the bamboo trees were used to help make roofs and walls to the houses and pipes too through which water could be carried. And chairs made from bamboo trees too, as well as beds and buckets, baskets and matting, and the frame work of umbrellas, lanterns and fans, rakes, combs, sticks. From the leaves raincoats were made, so that David did not wonder that Yangtze admired them for their usefulness, but he admired them mostly because they were so lovely to see.

There were willows growing along the river's banks too, and the soil along the river was really fat looking and quite yellow.

"Good rich soil," Yangtze said, "and yellow is our favorite and most important color over here. It's what we call the imperial color."

There were islands along the river. Now and again there was a mist and then the sun would quickly come out and there were rainbows and the dampness of the dirt didn't get David wet at all.

They passed tea fields and Yangtze said:

"Sometimes they call me the river of the Fragrant Tea Fields. Isn't that a nice name?"

David agreed that it was. "Then," continued Yangtze, "Hong Kong, down along the coast, means Fragrant Streams as in the olden days vessels used to put in there to get fresh and sweet water."

David saw sheds decked with orange blossom wreaths and perfumed flowers and he saw silk worms being hatched under blankets, spinning their silken cocoons. He saw Yangtze at times looking as thick as though made of pea soup and Yangtze laughed when David spoke of it.

"I even make part of the Pacific yellow too!"

On they passed by farms and little settlements where Map children played and where banners waved in the breeze or where lanterns shook and almost seemed to be merrily laughing.

"Now and again," said Yangtze, "typhoons sweep in from the Yellow sea. That's when your friend Wind gets excited. Oh, but it gets excited."

Seeing Big League BASEBALL

By BILLY EVANS

Sportswriter, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

Umpires are human and make mistakes. In my long career I know of only one umpire who always insisted that he never made a mistake in his life. He was the late Silk O'Loughlin, one of the most colorful arbiters that ever graced the game. O'Loughlin was one of the few umpires who had drawing powers at the gate. The fans liked to see him in action. His famous "Strike Tuh," will live forever. "Tuh" has become an accepted substitute for two in every-day life aside from baseball. O'Loughlin had a remarkable voice and he was proud of it. All umpires have their sensitive points; Silk was mighty fussy about his vocal chords. Well I do recall the remark made by a certain star to Silk one afternoon when he was suffering a trifle from hoarseness. The star, who was a pitcher, was disagreeing with O'Loughlin most of the afternoon on his judgment of balls and strikes. Silk was peeved. After he called one that particularly displeased the pitcher, that worthy person said to O'Loughlin:

"If I was you, Silk, I would see one of the best throat specialists in the city just as soon as the game is over."

"Why are you so interested in my throat trouble?"

"Simply, because, if you ever lose your voice you are through as an umpire, it's your only asset." Silk was furious and in the next inning, anxious to chase the fresh person, he seized an incident that really didn't merit ejection from the game but nevertheless sent the player to the showers. Anyway, like all stories, it went the rounds of the league. Any time a player for any reason wanted to depart from the game, he made unkind remarks about Silk's voice being his only asset as an umpire.

Sometimes I doubted it but never was I able to get Silk to admit that he might have been wrong. Often I would try to josh him along by telling him I thought he missed a certain play, that I would never mention it to anyone if he admitted it, but I always failed in my efforts to pin O'Loughlin down to the fact that possibly he might sometimes have been wrong.

O'Loughlin was Irish. It is hardly necessary to state that fact; his name is sufficient. Never will I forget the delight Silk took in one of his favorite ejaculations to protesting players. As the Claneys, McCarthys, O'Neills and Burkes would cluster around Silk and tell him how blind he was, he would listen for a time and then with a wave of his arm that meant trouble would shout:

"Get out of here. Never missed one in my life. Too late to start now. The pope for religion, O'Loughlin for baseball, both infallible."

That remark always drew the ire of the players, but they went on their way because they knew that was the final ultimatum before chasing them to the showers. That was his favorite line for handling ball players of Irish extraction.

If after some decision Silk perceived that among the players protesting his ruling were men bearing the name of Schmidt, Mueller, Schneider and others of German extraction, he would listen for a time in evident disgust and then, having heard enough, he would invariably say:

"If you fellows are not back in your position when I reach the plate, all of you are through for the day. There isn't any use of being Dutch if you're not dumb." The Schmidts, Muellers and Schneiders didn't like that expression, but they knew it was Silk's final ultimatum and that they had better be on their way.

In handling out his line of repartee, Silk didn't overlook a thing. If a player had a certain outstanding fault, he never failed to remind him of it. When some athlete with a poor batting average would strenuously protest to a strike, he would usually squelch the young man thusly:

"So I kicked the one, eh? Well you sure have your nerve kicking on anything I do. I happened to be looking at the batting averages this morning and you ain't hitting your weight. Get in there and hit: the pitcher is supposed to be the one fooling you, not me."

THE COMMUNITY YARDSTICK

The acid test of any community is: "Is it a good place in which to bring up a child?" Unless this question can be answered in the affirmative, then no matter what other attributes of success it may have, the community is destined to fail to become an outstanding community.

We must remember the babies of today are the men and women of tomorrow—those who will carry on when we have relinquished the tasks, both great and small.

Other nations are making the question of birth and rearing children a paramount issue. If our nation is to maintain its leadership in years to come as is the case at the present time, every community in this land must rigidly apply the acid test—"Do We Give Our Babies a Fair Chance to Live?"

If our rating is above the average as shown in the Community Yardstick Page elsewhere in this issue, wherein our business and professional men have made this information possible, well and good—let's keep it there; if it is not up to the standard, by all means we should lose no time in taking steps to put it there.

We must consistently bear in mind the three essential factors in determining what we are doing for child life in this community:

1. Do we give our babies a chance to live?
2. Do our children receive an education to fit them for life?
3. Do our incomes provide the proper standard of living?

On first reading, they seem to be very simple questions. But the more carefully they are studied, the more thoroughly they are applied to our own community, the greater their importance becomes. These three simple tests bring out both the strength and the weaknesses of any community's interests in the children.

For Daly City to succeed and prosper, we should strive to become an ideal community in which to bring up children. We have made great progress, we have adopted measures that have a great bearing upon improved conditions for our children. But we are still short of our goal. We have not yet achieved the ideal.

Let us measure our progress with the Community Yardstick and then chart our course. Let us strive to make Daly City an ideal place in which to bring up a child.

There are many parents in Daly City whose only contact with their children's school is the child itself. Perhaps they have never even set foot inside of the school that trains their child.

We need an awakening of public conscience in this community toward our schools. We need a greater cooperation between the parents in Daly City and our teachers. A greater cooperation between school and home means the training of a finer group of future citizens.

National leaders are agreed that the education of our youth has become almost our largest and certainly our most important activity. Each year has found an increasing interest on the part of the citizens of this country in education. This is evidenced by the fact that although the population of the nation has increased approximately 8 per cent during the past nine years, we have witnessed a 14 per cent increase in the number of children in our grade schools, and a 70 per cent increase in the number of children in our high schools. In a period of less than ten years we have expanded our educational system from an outlay of twelve hundred million dollars to twenty-seven hundred million dollars.

In spite of this tremendous growth in school attendance and investment, many educators tell us that the adult population of this country are not taking the active interest in educational matters that the importance of the subject deserves.

This week's community campaign deals with this important factor in community life—the school. It presents some figures worthy of study. Equality of opportunity is the right of every child in Daly City, and every adult, whether a parent or not, should be interested in educational matters, for the way our young people are trained determines the citizens they are to be.

THE PRISON PROBLEM

Ohio's recent tragedy, in which more than 320 prisoners were burned to death in a series of fires supposed to have been set by inmates of the penitentiary at Columbus, brings forcibly to public notice once more the acute situation which overcrowding of American prisons has brought about.

This prison was built in 1890 to house only 1,500 convicts, yet 4,300 were confined there at the time of the disaster. Just what bearing this overcrowding had upon the horrible occurrence can not be definitely judged, but there is no doubt that there is some connection between them. In a report recently made the National Society of Penal Information said:

"The ancient plant at the state penitentiary in Columbus, one of the largest prisons in the country, suffers from a condition of overcrowding worse than in any other prison."

Recent disastrous prison mutinies in Colorado, New York and elsewhere have been attributed to the conditions brought about by such overcrowding. That men would become so desperate as to deliberately set fire to the penitentiary in the hope of escaping during the confusion indicates that their situation must have been almost intolerable.

Only a few days ago Attorney General Mitchell warned against a further congestion of the Federal prison population, and it appears that a condition of overcrowding is general, both in jails and penitentiaries throughout the country.

MOUNT VERNON

In 1932 the nation will celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of Washington's birth. It has been suggested that this occasion be marked by the purchase of Mount Vernon, his home and last resting place, by the government.

This national shrine was saved for posterity by the patriotic efforts of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, which took over the property in 1859. It is maintained with its priceless relics through the charge of a small fee for visitors who view the premises in great numbers each year.

Only by this means could the priceless heritage of Mount Vernon have been preserved, in view of the negligence of the government in the past. But it is now felt that this greatest of all American landmarks should become the common property of the whole nation, and that all who desire to visit it should be permitted to do so without the payment of even the small fee now charged.

It is not that anyone particularly objects to the fee, but in principle a pilgrimage to the home and tomb of Washington should be free from any suggestion of commercialism.

Congress should purchase Mount Vernon outright and present it to the nation and to the world on Washington's two hundredth anniversary.

THE AMAZING LINDY

Another epoch-making feat of aviation must be credited to Charles A. Lindbergh, who on Easter Sunday covered the distance of 2,530 miles between Los Angeles and New York in 14 hours, 45 minutes and 15 seconds, beating all previous transcontinental records nearly three hours. He was accompanied by Mrs. Lindbergh.

One stop was made, at Wichita, Kansas, for refuelling, which took 22 minutes. The average flying speed was 175 miles an hour, and the flight was made at unusually high altitudes of from 10,000 to 15,000 feet.

While Lindbergh's latest accomplishment does not compare in daring with his great flight from New York to Paris, which first brought him world acclaim, it again demonstrates his undisputed right to the title of king of the air.

If his fame rested solely upon his New York to Paris flight, it might be thought that he was merely lucky in performing a spectacular stunt. But his subsequent performances have been convincing of his consummate skill, which has been put to the severest tests time and again.

THE VALUE OF TRAVEL

Soon the vacation season will be here, and many thousands of persons will visit various interesting places for the first time, some in our own country and others abroad. While recreation will be the principal aim of many, a majority will expect to learn something of permanent value during their travels.

In order that one may derive the most benefit from his travel experiences, it would be well to find out as much as possible about the places to be visited ahead of time. Then, when he actually sees the places and objects of which he has studied, he will gain a more lasting impression of their significance.

Information gained from guides and handbooks during one's travels is valuable, of course, but it is generally superficial, and lacking in the historical background which is necessary for a full understanding and appreciation of the famous places where history has been made.

The educational value of travel depends largely upon knowing beforehand what one wants to see, and why.

Who remembers when reformers used to rave about the coca-cola menace?

MOTHER'S LOVE

"There is an endearing tenderness in the love of a mother to a son that transcends all other affections of the heart."

"It is neither to be chilled by selfishness, nor daunted by danger, nor weakened by worthiness, nor stifled by ingratitude. She will sacrifice every comfort to his convenience; she will surrender every pleasure to his enjoyment; she will glory in his fame and exult in his prosperity. And if adversity overtake him, he will be the dearest to her by misfortune; and if disgrace fall upon his name, she will still love and cherish him. And if all the world beside cast him off, she will be all the world to him."—Washington Irving.

The above covers everything I could express in a dozen pages of many beautiful thoughts from varied and somber lives. For who, no matter what path of life he chose, does not love a mother. She might not have been a perfect one; she might not have given him a perfect father. He himself may not be as he might have been. Yet his heart beats a bit faster and a flood of reverence fills his soul when he sees her face, or feels the touch of the dear hand, or visions the past of his boyhood days, and the happy moments at the knee of his beloved mother. So it is with those of the busy world. We have set apart a day throughout our nation of reverence to mothers who have passed to our Heavenly home to mother those angelic ones. We pay homage to the mothers who are still with us. Some are close around us, ever guarding and watchful of their offspring; and to those who are by distance separated from us, but who are ever close and ever praying, as only a mother can pray for her child's welfare. And may these prayers ring in the ears of those who have not cared to listen.

Let this day for mothers who have done their best, when indeed it was hard to do, get their answer from their children. Send a message of love and cheer. Send a message of gratitude to the mother who has done for you what no other being can do. God bless all mothers.

LILLIAN GUILD LANDINI.

MOTHER

One little word, but in it lies
A magic in no other,
For all of life, and hope, and love
Is in that one word, Mother!

THE NOSE-COUNTERS

Many amusing stories are being told of the woes of Uncle Sam's census enumerators, who have been laboring faithfully during the last few weeks to get an accurate count of our population, together with such other information as the census act requires.

In Iowa an enumerator found a man whose house stood on a county line, and whose bed had its head in one county and its foot in another. After due consideration it was decided that the "head of the family" was in the county in which the head of his bed was located.

President Hoover was required to confide to the enumerator that he was able to read and write, and that he was married to his first (and only) wife at the age of 25.

One nose counter made 12 cents extra by happening to arrive at a home a few minutes after triplets had been born. In another case a baby had not been named and the enumerator suggested the name of Alice, which was accepted by the parents.

A few census takers admitted that they had habitually added from 10 to 15 years to the ages given by certain ladies in their territory, when their questions had appeared to be embarrassing.

One lady enumerator was unable to get information from a Chinese who thought she was trying to obtain a laundry package without presenting her ticket.

FATALITY OF DISEASES

If you were told that you must have any one of the well recognized diseases and take your chances on recovery, which would you choose? According to two eminent physicians who have studied the percentages of fatalities from various maladies, your best bet would be to choose having measles.

For they have found that only four-tenths of one per cent of cases of measles prove fatal. On the other hand, the most deadly of acute diseases is lockjaw, which is also one of the most horrible. Yet lockjaw is not necessarily fatal, as many may believe. In fact, it is nowadays fatal in only 41 per cent of cases, considerably less than one-half.

Among the more common diseases, pneumonia is the most deadly. Still, even in this most serious malady the mortality rate is only 17 per cent.

These figures, we assume, are based upon the assumption that no other complications are present. As a matter of practical experience, a very great number of deaths are due not merely to the acute disease which may be the preponderant factor, but to a combination of causes.

Five mail sacks taken in a truck hold-up in Chicago have been found. And, strange as it may seem, they were found empty.

SPORTS AND TRADE

Sports play an important part in encouraging international trade and in bringing about better understanding among people of various countries, according to Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce. Last year American trade in sporting goods with foreign countries amounted to nearly $15,000,000.

Baseball is becoming increasingly popular in Japan, as well as in Cuba, Mexico and other Latin-American republics. Football is taking hold in Mexico, although it has been considered as a game especially adapted to colder weather than is found there.

The story is told of an American tennis racket manufacturer who avoided shutting down production for half the year by developing a market in countries south of the Equator, which have summer while we have winter.

For a long time America imported most of its golf sticks and balls from England, but today we export more golf equipment than we import, due largely to development in this country of the steel shaft and larger ball.

One of the interesting statements made by Dr. Klein is that most of the skis used in the winter sports at St. Moritz, Switzerland, are made in Memphis, Tenn., while many from the same place are exported to Norway, where skiing is the national sport.

MOTHER'S DAY

A mother's love—how sweet the name!

What is a mother's love?
A noble, pure and tender flame,
Enkindled from above,
To bless a heart of earthly mold;
The warmest love that can't grow cold—
This is a mother's love.

VARIOUS KINDS

I was looking for a copy of "Tales from Shakespeare" by Charles and Mary Lamb. As I was in a hurry I cut the title down and asked the girl at the book counter of one of our department stores, whether she had "Lamb's Tales." Imagine my amazement when she directed me in a very superior tone: "Lamb's tails? Fur department—fifth floor." — Forbes Magazine.

An expert examination of furs might disclose that the Easter rabbit was really a seal.

EXCITING COMEDY DRAMA AT THE GEARY THEATRE

"Among the Married," Vincent Lawrence's exciting three act comedy drama that has been receiving such favorable attention in New York and Los Angeles, comes to the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, on Sunday night, May 11, following "The Criminal Code."

This spicy comedy deals with a daring theme, martial infidelity, but the author treats his subject in such a delightful manner that audiences everywhere have been held spellbound by its magnetic appeal. Incidentally, "Among the Married" has been acclaimed the finest of all Lawrence's works, a notable compliment.

The sparkling characters of "Among the Married" will be interpreted by a sterling cast. Robert Frazer, Miami Alvarez, Dudley Ayres, Barbara Brown, Howard Russell and Virginia Thornton play the important roles.

George Jean Nathan, dean of New York critics, in writing of "Among the Married," said "That is was the best play of the year."

Seats are now on sale. There will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The engagement is limited to two weeks.

The all talking motion picture version of "Journey's End" comes to the Geary on May 25. Due to the importance of "Journey's End" the theatre has deviated from its usual policy of playing only legitimate productions.

ROAD WILL CROSS TWO CONTINENTS

Preliminary work on the International Highway, which will traverse the western sections of North and South America, is now under way in countries adjoining the United States, while steps have been taken in Pacific Coast states to effect a permanent organization to promote this project, reports the California State Automobile Association. Coordination of the efforts of various organizations sponsoring this project is the aim of the various groups in Pacific Coast states supporting the plan. The board of directors of the California State Automobile Association recently endorsed the proposed international highway, urging the federal government and western motor clubs to extend to nations north and south cooperation to make this route a reality.

For more than a month a path-finding party of five cars of Automobile Club of Southern California officials has been blazing a trail down the west coast of Mexico, which eventually will be transformed into an automobile highway. Now work has been started on establishing a route from Vancouver through British Columbia to Alaska, where it may meet a similar road in Uncle Sam's territory again, extending to Fairbanks.

The two points at which active work is now progressing on the proposed highway uniting eighteen nations and two continents are farther apart than from New York to San Francisco. The automobile club party has reached Mexico City, the capital of the southern republic, and in Vancouver, B. C., preparations are under way to send a pathfinding caravan north toward Alaska. It is understood that the Canadian government will lend its aid to that part of the international highway that will pass through Canada, and already the United States government has intimated its willingness to construct its part of the road in Alaska, so that it does not require a far flung glance to the future to visualize before long an automobile highway from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Mexico City, a distance approximating 6,000 miles, of which a large portion is already travelable and 1,600 miles of which is already the longest stretch of paved highway in the world.

An uplift worker, visiting a prison, was much impressed by the melancholy attitude of one man she found. "My poor man," she sympathized, "what is the length of your term?" "Depends on politics, lady," replied the melancholy one. "I'm the warden."

Another surplus that is worrying the government is that of prisoners.

OAKLAND AIRPORT TO STAGE AIR SHOW

With the Oakland Airport chosen as its site, Northern California's first great air show, the Pacific Coast Aeronautical Exposition, will be held there for nine days commencing June 28, and will offer to millions their first opportunity to see, at close range, all the newest developments in the world of aviation.

Plans now under way contemplate the exhibition of many types of aircraft, including such famous developments as the Curtiss Tanager, winner of the $100,000 Guggenheim safety award, the Pitcairn Auto-Gyro and the Northrup Flying Wing, sensations of the industry's most recent developments, the huge 32-passenger Fokker transport ship, and a great array of sport planes, lighter commercial ships, gliders and engines, among them the new and world-famed Packard Diesel motor. Possibility that the giant Dormier Do-X, 160-passenger flying boat, may be on hand for the exposition is also seen in the efforts of the committee in charge of developing the show. This massive seaplane will, according to plans, be flown to America early this summer, and efforts are being made to arrange for its presence at the forthcoming Oakland display.

Work is already in progress at the great 840-acre Oakland Municipal Airport in preparation for the exposition.

HAS FAITH IN FUTURE

"Faith in your men, faith in your business, faith in the future doesn't mean anything until you translate it into action, into investments in plant and equipment to produce more business," declares C. Bohack, founder of the chain of stores bearing his name, in Forbes Magazine. "If you want your men to put all they've got into working with you, you've got to put your mind into turning up more and more work for them."

"The other day some one asked me if I thought business would be good this year. 'Better!' I said—'Better for us because we are going to make it better!'"

The Community Yardstick

Is it a good place in which to bring up a child? That is the acid test applied to any town.

How can we find the answer? By using the community yardstick—which provides a three-way test of the factors that have a direct bearing upon child life in the community. It will take but a few minutes to measure our community with this yardstick and ascertain whether or not this is a good place to bring up children. Here are the acid tests

1. Do We Give Our Babies a Fair Chance to Live?

GOOD

In order to attain the rating "Good" the infant death rate of a community should not exceed five deaths, during the first year, out of each one hundred babies born alive.

FAIR

Any community in which the infant mortality exceeds seven and one-half deaths during the first year, out of each one hundred babies born alive, would be rated as "Fair."

POOR

This low rating is applied only to communities where the conditions have reached the disgraceful state where there are ten or more deaths of babies, during the first year, out of each one hundred born alive.

The infant of today is the citizen of tomorrow—it is deserving of a fair chance. The safeguard of infant life is the least a community can guarantee. Baby deaths are largely preventable.

2. Do Our Children Receive an Education to Fit Them for Life?

GOOD

This rating is secured by communities who have safeguarded their future citizenship by seeing that at least seventy-five out of every one hundred children of school age are attending schools.

FAIR

Whenever only sixty children out of every one hundred children are attending schools the community is given a rating of "Fair."

POOR

This rating is applied to communities where the citizenship has failed in its responsibility to the children to such an extent that less than one-half of the children of school age are attending schools.

What greater handicap can be placed upon a child in its preparation for life, than the lack of an education. Every American boy and girl deserves the chance to go to school.

3. Do Our Incomes Provide the Proper Standard of Living?

GOOD

The rating "Good" may be applied to a community where 90% of the families are enjoying an annual income of more than $2,000 per year.

FAIR

A community where 90% of the families receive an income annually of from $1,800 to $2,000 is entitled to a rating of "Fair."

POOR

This rating is given to communities where a low standard of living is found; where the income of 90% of the families is $1,500 or less.

Every community should seek to provide sufficient incomes for at least ninety per cent of its families so that they may secure the comforts for their children that lead to a healthy and happy childhood and youth.

Folks, these "acid tests" put the problem squarely up to us. Your ideas will be of interest to others. Let's talk it over. No matter how good our standing, it may be bettered, but only through the co-operation of all in

A REAL ANNIVERSARY

MY MOTHER

You are so brave, My Mother,
You meet the daily challenges fear-
lessly,
You never pull life's threads im-
patiently,
You smooth them out for others and for me.

My Mother!

You are so kind, My Mother,
The faults of folks your eyes refuse to see

You trust them and that trust all magically
Makes them live up to what they long to be.

My Mother!

You are so wise, My Mother,
Unfettered by the barriers life may rear,
You move as if to music, high and clear

And where you are, is comfort and good cheer,
My Mother!

If I am brave, My Mother,
Or kind or wise as down life's way
I go

It will be that I but reflect the glow
That fills my heart, O dearest heart
I know,
My Mother!

By M. A. H.

Mother's Day is here again. A real anniversary, May 11, 1930.

At a meeting in Indianapolis on the evening of February 7, 1904, at which Frank E. Herring, now Past Grand Worthy President of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, had spoken before a memorial service of Indianapolis Aerie, the young speaker, a professor at Notre Dame University, noted chiefly as being the first Protestant to hold such a position in that university, devoted most of his address to mothers and their love, and urged Eagles throughout the country to honor mothers with annual exercises. This address made by Frank Herring in a burst of silver-tongued oratory, traced all goodness of men to mother love, all the advancement of civilization to the sacrifices of motherhood, and in that memory uplift themselves from sordid thoughts to higher planes of action. The idea caught and held attention. It was an appeal to something fundamental. It tapped the wells of inspiration.

So it happened that in many Eagles lodges, long before Mother's Day became a national institution, programs each year were held to honor the mothers of men.

The idea that found expression in the English Opera House, where this meeting was held, had become a movement. The unsuspecting Frank Herring was making history.

Already the world is asking whence came this national Mother's Day in the United States? Here is the document with the answer. It is taken from the Congressional Record, which contains the daily official proceedings of the United States Congress. Anyone may refer to this document, page 3682, the Congressional Record for February 12, 1930. It will stand, through the years, as an authentic record of the very beginning of the nation-wide movement that has resulted in our present Mother's Day.

The day this was published in the Congressional Record was Lincoln's birthday. Isn't it a striking coincidence? For it was Lincoln who said: "All that I am or hope to be I owe to my angel mother."

When a few years ago the American War Mothers became interested in tracing the origin of this national anniversary, they searched the records. Others claimed recognition for this honor. But the War Mothers, one of the few bodies chartered by Congress, decided that Frank E. Herring was the real father of Mother's Day. Last fall a committee of War Mothers conferred upon Frank E. Herring the decoration of War Mothers of America, a bar certifying him to be the founder of Mother's Day.

A member of the committee, in presenting this bar, said:

"Mr. Herring, it gives me the greatest satisfaction to decorate you with this, our emblem. Only three others have received this decoration, namely, General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United States Army, Rear Admiral Countz of the Navy, and Colonel James E. Moss, president of the United States Living Flag Association.

"Their have a bar with their name engraved and our beloved insignia. You have a distinction that no one else can ever have! A bar with your name and a bar with the inscription 'Father of Mother's Day.'

"The ribbon is the Victory Ribbon, which adorns the medals given our heroes for exceptional service.

"The patriotic service you have rendered in behalf of the aged; the service you have rendered the motherhood of the nation, entitles you to this Victory Ribbon and our War Mothers Medal."

The committee, after the presentation of the bar, were themselves honored by a gathering of Mr. Herring's intimates at a dinner which will long be remembered by those fortunate enough to have been there. In characteristic manner, Mr. Herring—placing the work yet to be done for the post-war projects of the War Mothers ahead of any personal honor he could take to himself, gave the men who had gathered to honor him a vision of his indefatigable energy in behalf of others.

Mr. Herring has already spent the best years of his life in humane enterprises. Many men would sit back with satisfaction to reflect on work well done, thinking of a well-earned rest. But, moved by a relentless energy, Mr. Herring thinks of his international recognition as the originator of Mother's Day, and his accomplishment in placing more than 600,000 men of the Fraternal Order of Eagles behind the projects of the War Mothers, not as an end, but as a beginning for a greater service.

South Bend has reason to be proud of Frank E. Herring, but they are no prouder of him than are his fraternal brothers and associates.

Not content to rest on laurels already won as "Father of Mother's Day," Past Grand Worthy President of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, and editor of that famous Eagles magazine, he is now working with unrelenting fervor for the old age pension law, which is to provide a pension for needy residents over 65 years of age. We are proud to say that our own state of California has made it a law. During the month of April it became a law in the state of New York.

IT WORKED

Lewis L. Pierson, chairman of the board, Irving Trust Company, was discussing with a friend the hazard of people of limited means pyramiding their profits from stock speculation. He told of a cattle raiser in Montana who was advised by an old associate to come to New York where he could readily make money. The day after the smash he told his advisor: "I am like the man who wrote a letter for publication endorsing a patent medicine.

"Dear Doctor: I had a large wart on the end of my nose and my drug-gist advised me to use your world famous wart cure. I used only one-quarter of a bottle and now I have no wart—and no nose."—Forbes Magazine.

TAMALPAIS ROAD TO BE IMPROVED

Starting at an early date, the Ridgecrest Boulevard leading to the summit of Mt. Tamalpais is to be greatly improved, states a report received by the Touring Department of the National Automobile Club. The last two-and-a-half miles are to be relocated, thereby eliminating two or three short steep pitches running as high as 18 per cent. With the exception of these last two and one-half miles, the road from the Toll Gate to the summit is practically all high gear.

This is one of the most scenic drives in Northern California, and is readily accessible from San Francisco and Bay Region points within the space of two or three hours. From Sausalito or San Rafael, one may travel over excellent paved highway to San Anselmo. From this point, a good graded dirt and gravel, high-gear road extends to Alpine Dam. This road winds down over easy grades along the shore of Alpine Lake, thence across the dam. From this point on the road becomes narrow and winding, but offers room at all points for the passing of two cars. The turns are all wide and well banked and should offer no difficulty to the driver with ordinary experience.

From the Toll Gate to the summit one traverses a fair to good gravel road. After having driven this road, it is easy to understand how the road derived the name "Ridgecrest." Following the ridge for nearly its entire distance, every turn brings forth a more beautiful and inspiring sight. To the west lies the Pacific, in the foreground the Golden Gate, beyond which San Francisco flings its irregular skyline. Further away, across the blue expanse of San Francisco Bay, the East Bay cities nestle along the base of the hills, above which Mt. Diablo rears its crest.

COUNTY WILL PROTECT PESCADERO WATER RIGHTS

San Mateo county will have to employ a hydraulic engineer to protect its interests in the Pescadero creek against the move to divert waters of the Peters, Slate and Oil creeks—tributaries of the Pescadero creek—for irrigation purposes in Santa Cruz and Santa Clara counties.

The board of supervisors last Monday decided on drastic action following receipt of a copy of a letter from Cyril Williams, Jr., San Francisco civil engineer, representing Mrs. Edith Van Antwerp, the applicant, to Harold Conklin of the Division of Water Resources, in which Williams says that he "cannot see that the county of San Mateo has any legal grounds for protest."

Application to divert the headwaters of the Pescadero creek was made late last year by Mrs. Van Antwerp, owner of a large amount of property on the coastside. The board was told of the move by George Dunn, Half Moon Bay publisher.

Both County Engineer George A. Kneese and District Attorney Franklin Swart advised the supervisors that any diversion of the waters that go into the Pescadero creek, will result in drying it up, which would destroy the natural beauty of the County Memorial park, through which it runs, and embarrass the coastside. The board's official protest was filed with the State Water Division several months ago.

Swart told the board Monday that the situation "justifies the expense of a hydraulic engineer to investigate in behalf of the county."

The matter was referred to the county engineer for immediate action.

GAS SERVICE OUTSTANDING

The gas industry is playing a leading part in the development of the nation.

Gas cooking, refrigeration and central heating are conveniences of the modern home. And in industry gas fuel has been adapted to thousands of manufacturing operations where it has established new and higher standards of efficiency and economy.

Today pipe line systems are being extended into a multitude of towns that never before had the advantages of gas service. Gas, like electricity, has become a necessity in the social and industrial development of any community.

Uncle Sam got out easy after all. It will cost him less than a billion dollars to build enough warships to comply with the disarmament pact.

The construction of a large central laboratory equipped for research work in long distance telephony and telegraphy has recently been completed in Moscow.

One of the most interesting members of Byrd's expedition to Antarctica was Paul a Siple, Eagle Scout of Erie, Pa., who made a fine record in the far South and will be welcomed with great enthusiasm upon his return home in a few weeks. Admiral Byrd recently gave a flattering account of Siple's work with the expedition in a radio address to the Boy Scouts of America.
